

After a long (for me anyway) writing pause

So, nothing but a complete switch-off in Cornwall no less – hence my lack of entries for the past week. We arrived last Saturday and are sitting around suspended in space and time as one does. The journey back was a good four hours by car – nothing compared with returning home from a trip abroad and much less stressful.

Whilst randomly surfing I found this video of Jordan Peterson which I find particularly apposite in this day and age. Technical communication has never been so pervasive yet loneliness has never been so great, in my opinion anyway. The elements for a better community spirit in towns and cities are there – it just needs someone to do some tweaking. We could pick one or two towns and use these as pilot projects.

It is taking me time to write my diary so I will need this week to catch up.