

Unspoiled and ancient woodland

I became really frustrated with trying to sign up for Zoom as a host. I was going round and round in circles, nothing worked, so I decided to leave and come back again at some future time. Sometimes things resolve themselves when you leave them alone. We decided to go for a walk.

A lovely meadow with a clear blue sky and absolutely no sign of human habitation or interference. We discovered a valley where there have been very little 'managing' and where trees were left where they fell so we have a nice photo gallery to follow. Use Ctrl, and + to enlarge the images.

a foxhole, foreground, with a fallen tree and garlic is that a horse's head or a crocodile perhaps?
