

Too much, too much to do

Today, I been aware of all the things that I would love to do in just don't have time for stop this afternoon, a book arrived called power versus force which is to do with energy. It is so fascinating I'm through the first 3 chapters and cannot wait to read more.

In the earlier morning I read a deep and timely SAINT GERMAIN (Channeled by James McConnell) talking about the world seen from the view of discarnate spirits.

Francoise heard of a free course in 16 parts on cymatics, the science of sound, she has given me 2 lectures to listen to which are absolutely riveting saying for example this sound is not a wave it is a sphere. Sound can affect red blood cells. Wow.

Each day I spend 3 or 4 hours adding to my two websites, one on 5 G and one on COVID. The articles are so fascinating I would love to read them but all I can do is to see whether they are suitable for publication. I learn so much on a daily basis. I can't wait for tomorrow.

I am preparing to make a video publicizing my COVID website to try and wake people up and I'm assembling data. This takes quite a lot of aggression bringing things together and deciding how I'm going to present it.

I must finally summarize the text for my personal psychic website. There isn't time for this today so I must do it tomorrow.

I got very caught up on a video by Mark Passio who's got a great talent for explaining things clearly – how the world is being taken over by the corporates who think they have a right to be lord and master over everyone. It is most important that we resist this.

My tasks today consisted of writing letters to a couple of allotment holders who had not maintained their plots, telephoning someone who was going to give me a job, going off shopping in the wind and the rain which I didn't mind because it's not cold.

I'm going to have to speak to my men's group on Thursday about covid. They are in a very nice bubble if that's not a contradiction in terms but in the last seven meetings no one has even mentioned the dread that is hanging over us. I think it's because they don't want to face it but if I'm going to be part of a group, particularly a Christian group, the implications of this must be discussed. I can't just keep my mouth closed forever. Surely someone must have some views. We have a doctor in the group. He may not be able to say what he thinks for fear of being fired
